It started accidentally. During my very first lesson of programming at the university I have inadvertently generated an infinite loop which was printing "I am coding!" to the console. Apparently I had no other choice than to code from then on, not that I wanted - I just can not figure out how to get out of this loop yet :)

I am eager to be involved and to contribute to your company's growth. Let us talk about how I can help in improving your product and achieving your goals.

MORE ABOUT ME

I have deep admiration for hard work, commitment and diligence. I greatly believe in mutual respect and equality. Reading english books is among my major hobbies - self development and human relation ones are favourites. Drawing is yet another - I usually get caught up in the process for couple hours at the time.

I constantly try to learn something new - whether it is english, solving sudoku puzzles, playing the guitar or skating. I am also keen on listening to podcasts.
